

Carol A. Chester

Carol A. Chester is a consummate educator—a master teacher with a love for children.

Born and raised in Dallas in a home marked by an unwavering commitment to a biblical worldview, her life reflects strong biblical convictions.

At an early age, her father called out her teaching gift and began to prepare her vocationally.

In 1970, she received her bachelor's degree and teaching certificate from the University of Texas at Austin.

Upon graduation, she began her teaching career at a private Christian school. When she became a mother, she put her teaching career on hold to raise her two daughters. After her daughters were grown, she returned to teaching.

In 1990, Carol joined the faculty of Providence Christian School in Dallas. For fifteen years, she taught first grade. During this time, she developed a first grade math program that has been adopted by many schools. In 2005, she became head of the lower school at Providence.

Carol's accomplishments are many. In addition to her proven classroom prowess with students, she is highly regarded by parents, her fellow faculty members, the administration, and the board. As an administrator, her educational standards are unwaveringly grounded in biblical principles.

She is known for her insight into human relationships and her ability to see the root issues driving behavior. Certified to administer personality profiles, she uses these tools to gain insight into relational dynamics.

Her driving passion in life is to help parents raise children based on a biblical worldview. She is adroit at helping people understand who they are in Christ and the call of God on their lives.

Carol is married to her high school sweetheart. They have two grown daughters, two sons-in-law, three grandsons, and a granddaughter. She and her husband are leaders in Sojourn Church; her husband serves as an elder.
